- 1. CMS makes provider data and PBM affiliate economics auditable
- 2. UnitedHealth demonstrates that selective contraction can repair margins
- 3. Humana retains clinic control while transferring more capital risk
- 4. Alignment turns its Stars loss into a regulatory-methodology challenge

Executive Summary

- CMS converted two historically weak controls into measurable 2028 obligations. Medicare Advantage plans would face recurring provider-directory verification and public accuracy grades, while Part D PBMs would face cost-based compensation, affiliate reporting, audit and disgorgement requirements. The immediate effect is implementation demand; the larger economic effect is potential redistribution of vertically integrated pharmacy revenue. (cms.gov)
- UnitedHealth's recovery is now visibly volume-for-margin rather than volume-led. UnitedHealthcare improved profitability while shedding 935,000 Medicare Advantage members since year-end; Optum Health similarly restored margin while exiting value-based-care markets lacking sufficient density. (sec.gov)
- Humana found a less balance-sheet-intensive structure for retaining operational control of CenterWell clinics. BlackRock will majority-own nearly 150 clinics, but CenterWell will continue managing them; removal of the legacy put obligation materially changes Humana's capital exposure. (humana.gcs-web.com)

- Alignment's litigation makes part of the newly disclosed Stars divergence legally contingent. The suit does not restore 2028 quality-bonus revenue, but it creates a plausible recalculation path and complicates benefit and capital planning.
- Overall environment: improved for near-term payer margins and provider-asset capital flexibility; deteriorated for PBM and provider-directory compliance burden; broadly unchanged in aggregate.

1. CMS makes provider data and PBM affiliate economics auditable

What happened

On October 16, CMS proposed implementing provisions of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2026 for contract year 2028. Medicare Advantage organizations would have to verify most provider-directory listings at least every 90 days, conduct annual accuracy analyses using random samples and publish plan-level letter grades. Hospitals and specified facilities would generally receive annual verification. Enrollees misled by inaccurate listings would pay no more than in-network cost sharing. Public, machine-readable accuracy scores would follow in 2029. (CMS, Medicare Program; Implementation of Sections 6219, 6220, and 6224 of the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2026, October 16, 2026.) (cms.gov)

The Part D provisions are more economically significant. PBMs and affiliates generally could retain only bona fide service fees, with CMS proposing fair-market-value compensation based on the cost of an itemized service plus a reasonable markup—not drug price. PBMs would report compensation, guarantees, acquisition costs, pharmacy activity and affiliate arrangements; plan sponsors would gain audit rights, and prohibited remuneration could be disgorged through the sponsor to CMS. Annual reporting would begin no later than July 1, 2028. (Federal Register, CMS-4214-P, public inspection October 16, 2026; scheduled publication October 20, 2026.) (public-inspection.federalregister.gov)

Implication

Provider directories are moving from lightly governed consumer content to an audited master-data function. Plans will need identity resolution, roster reconciliation, provider outreach, sampling, evidence retention and defensible scoring across credentialing, contracting and FHIR-based directory infrastructure. That favors shared provider-data utilities, but switching costs will remain high because the liability sits with the plan.

For vertically integrated PBMs, the rule attacks ambiguity across rebate aggregation, specialty-pharmacy acquisition economics, administrative fees and affiliate transfers. The direction is toward explicit service pricing and sponsor-level visibility. The P&L magnitude remains uncertain until CMS finalizes definitions of cost and “reasonable markup,” but contract remediation must begin well before 2028.

Watch next

Whether CMS modifies the proposed cost-plus definition of fair market value and how it treats services performed across PBM, specialty-pharmacy, group-purchasing and plan affiliates.

2. UnitedHealth demonstrates that selective contraction can repair margins

What happened

UnitedHealth reported an 88.4% third-quarter medical-care ratio, versus 89.9% one year earlier, including $610 million of favorable reserve development. UnitedHealthcare’s operating margin rose to 3.3% from 2.1%, reflecting benefit changes, pricing and medical-cost management. Medicare Advantage enrollment, however, contracted by 935,000 members from year-end 2025. (UnitedHealth Group, Third Quarter 2026 Results, October 13, 2026.) (sec.gov)

Optum Health revenue declined 10% year over year because it reduced value-based-care membership in markets where it lacked sufficient scale, while operating margin improved to 3.2% from 0.2%. Optum Insight revenue grew 3%, and operating earnings increased to $1.28 billion from $920 million, which management attributed to product enhancements and operating efficiencies. (sec.gov)

Implication

The results resolve an important operating question: UnitedHealth’s retrenchment is producing margin recovery, but through narrower participation and greater local density—not broad membership growth. Competitors should expect continued discipline in MA benefit design and provider contracting during the current enrollment cycle.

For provider groups, the Optum Health result reinforces that value-based-care capital will concentrate in markets where an operator can align sufficient attributed lives, clinical capacity and pharmacy or specialty services. For health-technology vendors, the evidence is stronger for demand tied to cost takeout, payment accuracy and clinician productivity than for indiscriminate expansion of risk-bearing care platforms.

Watch next

Whether 2027 enrollment stabilizes without reversing the margin gains, and whether Optum resumes value-based-care growth only in markets where UnitedHealthcare or external payer volume provides adequate density.

3. Humana retains clinic control while transferring more capital risk

What happened

Humana announced on October 13 that BlackRock's HPS Investment Partners will acquire Welsh Carson's approximately $2.8 billion interest in joint ventures holding nearly 150 CenterWell Senior Primary Care clinics. BlackRock will own a majority interest; CenterWell will retain a minority stake and continue managing all clinics. The venture expects to fund existing operations, new clinics and acquisitions over the next two years. (humana.gcs-web.com)

Unlike the legacy structure, the new venture has no put option requiring Humana to repurchase the investor's position. CenterWell may elect to purchase clinics beginning in 2028; if clinics remain in 2033, BlackRock may initiate a sale process subject to CenterWell's first-offer right.

Implication

Humana is separating operational control from asset ownership. It preserves the clinical platform supporting MA care management and risk economics while lowering balance-sheet liabilities and the cost of expansion capital. That makes continued clinic growth more feasible following Humana's Stars recovery without committing future quality-bonus revenue to real-estate and clinic-development obligations.

The trade-off is longer-term ownership uncertainty. Humana retains management and optionality, but eventual purchase or sale decisions could affect where care-delivery economics ultimately accrue.

Watch next

The amount and deployment of BlackRock's additional capital, particularly whether growth favors de novo clinics or acquisitions in markets aligned with Humana's strongest MA contracts.

4. Alignment turns its Stars loss into a regulatory-methodology challenge

What happened

Alignment filed suit on October 9 challenging its 2027 Star Ratings, after its California HMO contract—serving approximately 75% of company membership—fell from four stars to 3.5 stars. The complaint argues that CMS continued using measures not properly adopted through notice-and-comment regulation, drawing on the earlier Clover decision. (Alignment Healthcare, Form 8-K, October 8, 2026; Healthcare Dive, Alignment sues CMS over 2027 Medicare Advantage star ratings crash, October 13, 2026.) (sec.gov)

Implication

Last week's Stars divergence is no longer solely a quality-execution issue; for affected contracts, it now includes legal option value. A successful expedited challenge could restore bonus economics, but no recalculation has occurred and Alignment must still address the underlying HOS and Part D performance weaknesses it identified.

Plans facing disputed methodology need parallel 2028 scenarios rather than assuming displayed ratings are either fully final or likely to be overturned. Reliable public timing for a merits decision was unavailable as of October 19.

Watch next

Whether the court accelerates review before 2028 bid development and whether additional carriers challenge the same measures.

What I'm Watching Next

- October 20, 2026: CMS-4214-P is scheduled for publication in the Federal Register. (public-inspection.federalregister.gov)
- December 15, 2026, at 5 p.m. EST: Comments on CMS-4214-P are due. (public-inspection.federalregister.gov)

Bottom Line

The week's most important change is CMS's conversion of MA provider-directory accuracy and Part D PBM economics into auditable, enforceable operating controls. Vertically integrated PBM affiliate compensation requires the closest strategic attention, while provider-data governance is the clearest near-term technology implementation opportunity. The December 15 comment deadline is the next confirmed event most likely to alter the rule's economic impact.
